Dear Andy:

On 4 December 1950 a final decision on the problem of overdrawals of annual leave was reached by the Comptroller, CIA. In general it was in our favor.

25X1A9a

The Comptroller (new title of [REDACTED]) decided that no deductions in pay which have not already been made would be required, but that leave overdrawn would be replaced from leave earned subsequent to date of overdrawal. We understand that an audit of leave balances of those people concerned will be made at the end of this year to ascertain that the Government suffers no overall financial loss by the transaction.

This takes care of [REDACTED] and of [REDACTED] case will I believe be understood by reading attached memoranda. We did not advise you that his case was also under consideration since such advice prior to a final determination would have served only to cause you and [REDACTED] unnecessary worry.

The decision does not permit restoration of pay to [REDACTED], and I believe we can do nothing more about that. Advise her of my regrets. Probably the only consolation to be found in it for her is the fact that her leave balance is now 4 hours larger than it would have been had the decision on her case been favorable.

With the above I believe we can call this matter settled. I hope so anyway, for it has been quite a headache to this office and I know it has inconvenienced and worried all personnel concerned.

Sincerely,
